Notes From Washington

By Charles J. Colden, Congressman, 17th District

It is needless for me to tell you that the opening of congress was a big event. The opening promised to be rather an ordinary affair until the evening before when it was announced the President would deliver his message in person.

When the President appeared, attended by his son, Jimmie, the House chamber thrilled with cheering and emotion. I felt heart and soul keenly that my throat filled up and I couldn't cheer even a little yep.

One of the important effects of the President's appearance before congress is his ability to lead the law-makers along his path of thinking. If there were those present who have been prompted to attack the President's program, they received a heavy setback by the presence of their Chief.

When the House was called to order by Speaker Rainey and the roll called to determine the presence of a quorum, formal motions were made and a recess taken until the time of the President's arrival.

The second day opened with the reading of another message from the President on finances. It indicated there would be no repeal of the Economy Act and but little encouragement for the raise of pay which appears to be the paramount issue in the Washington newspapers.

Chief Food and Drug Inspector Returns to Job J. R. Kirkpatrick, Ousted For Alleged Improper Conduct, Is Reinstated

As a result of pressure brought upon Dr. J. L. Pomeroy, county health officer, Jonathan R. Kirkpatrick, chief food and drug inspector, today was reinstated in the department as the result of a meeting in the office of Supervisor Roger Jessup.

The garden truck, in question was on truck farms near Inglewood and Torrance, a large part of it grown by Japanese. When Kirkpatrick was finally discharged he was so notified in the office of an attorney for one of the landowners. It was brought out at the civil service hearing. Since the hearing, the attorney succumbed of a heart ailment, it was learned today.

Oven Insulation is One Advantage of Modern Natural Gas Ranges

Heat stays in the oven of a modern gas range. The result is additional economy, as well as a more comfortable kitchen. Other advantages include the ease and certainty of automatic cooking, the cleanliness and efficiency of new-type burners, and, of course, the economy of natural gas.
